

ANTHRAX BREAKS OUT IN OGLESBY

Washington County a Veritable Hotbed of Disease.

NEGLECT CAUSES EPIDEMIC

Three Years Ago a Like Outbreak Occurred—Fatal to Man.

Special to The World. BARTLESVILLE, Aug. 19.—A serious outbreak of anthrax among cattle in Washington county, particularly in the neighborhood of Oglesby, is causing the department of agriculture much anxiety. The state veterinarian has now engaged in efforts to check the spread of the disease. Through ignorance, neglect or willful ignoring of the usual sanitary regulations of this section, it is believed that the spread of the disease is due to the fact that they have failed to take necessary precautions of animals that have been infected. The agents of the department are directing the destruction of carcasses and it is believed that the epidemic will soon be halted. Several herds are said to have been infected and it is estimated that at least 50 cattle have died of the disease in the last few days. Reports yesterday to the state board were to the effect that owners are entering voluntarily into the campaign to stamp out the epidemic and that carcasses are being burned everywhere that deaths from anthrax are found. Anthrax is quickly fatal to any animal life infected. There have been several cases of human fatalities and the infection is rapid. About three years ago there was an outbreak of anthrax in the same county. The then state veterinarian made inspection and gave a diagnosis which proved to have been radically wrong. When consulted of the presence of anthrax in returned to the scene and found that a young man, a county farm superintendent, had become infected and had been sent to Kansas City for treatment. The state agent was informed that the young man would die and in a fit of despondency, through belief that he was responsible for a human death in diagnosing the disease, the state veterinarian committed suicide. The farm agent soon recovered from the malady. Mr. Whitehurst said anthrax is as much of a menace to live stock as the foot and mouth disease. In Bartlesville affected in Washington and Craig no symptoms of disease appeared until the animals dropped and died.

MAN MEETS DEATH AS HE RESCUES 5 GIRLS

E. T. McNeal Drowns in Drainage Ditch Near Wellston While on Picnic Trip.

Special to The World.

WELLSVILLE, Aug. 19.—The details of how Eugene T. McNeal, 42 years old, was drowned last week in a drainage ditch near here in a heroic attempt to save the lives of five little girls in danger of drowning, were told yesterday for the first time by his sister, Mrs. B. Seehaver of Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Seehaver, together with the McNeals and some of their friends and their children, drove out from Luther for a picnic on the drainage ditch last Tuesday. The five little girls in the party, all of whom were less than 15 years old, were allowed to go in, but were told to stay out of the deep water. The rest of the party stayed on the bank to cook the supper.

The girls had been screaming, and when McNeal started down to get them for supper, he laughingly remarked that he was going to "spank" them for making so much noise.

When he arrived at the bank he saw that the little girls had gone out over their heads and were in danger of drowning. Without removing any of his clothing, he plunged in the water to save the children. He managed to push some of the smaller children into shallow water, and went out again to get the one girl who was still in danger. By this time Mrs. Blanche McNeal, wife of the drowned man, and Mrs. Will Arthur, a member of the party, had heard the screams and came down to the ditch. Seeing the danger, they tore off their dresses and using them as life lines, managed to drag the little girls up on the bank. As the last girl was dragged out, McNeal was seen to disappear, and did not come up again.

TARIFF REDUCTIONS AID COAL INDUSTRY

New Market Created for Oklahoma Coal in South America—Order Effective August First.

Special to The World.

MALESTER, Aug. 18.—With a tariff reduced to the point where it is possible for Oklahoma coal operators to become competitors with the rest of the world for the South American trade, new impetus has been given to the production in the McAlester fields, according to the men who have their money invested in coal properties adjacent to this city.

This new market was created for Oklahoma and the southwest by the recent lowering of the coal freight rate to South America. The order became effective August 1 according to the report received here. Primary reason for the reduction of the freight rate on coal was in order to give Oklahoma and other American operators a chance to get on a competitive basis with Great Britain mine owners, who have heretofore been supreme in the South American field.

In addition to giving the operators of Oklahoma a chance to compete with other countries in shipping coal to South America, the new freight rate will in all probability mean the opening of Port Arthur, Texas, as a shipping point in competition with Galveston, both because of the rate and because of the increased business which will enable Port Arthur to move up to the installation of new machines as has been done at Galveston.
